What was I, that I could withstand God?

"[God's] children can be so intolerant with one another. Neighboring factions, whether they be identified as groups or gangs, schools or states, counties or countries, often develop animosity. Such tendencies make me wonder:

Cannot boundary lines exist without becoming battle lines?

Could not people unite in waging war against the evils that beset mankind instead of waging war on each other? Sadly, answers to these questions are often no.

Through the years, discrimination based on ethnic or religious identity has led to senseless slaughter, vicious pogroms, and countless acts of cruelty. The face of history is pocked by the ugly scars of intolerance." (Russell M. Nelson, Perfection Pending, and Other Favorite Discourses, 67.)

If I slather them in Purell they won't ever get sick...

A great Pinterest meme will change my life...

If they carry a toothbrush everywhere, they won't have cavities...

If we always pay our tithing we will never have financial problems...

The family that prays together will never lose a kid...

If I marry a returned missionary in the temple our marriage will never have spiritual problems...

"...We are apt in our weakness to pray with our lips and scarcely expect in our hearts that our petitions will be granted.

I often think that we are not unlike the Saints of olden times who were gathered in prayer at the time of Peter's imprisonment.

...Yet we today feel surprised when the Lord manifests His power to us in any strong or otherwise remarkable manner;

our greatest cause for wonderment would seem to lie in the contemplation of His mercy, that He will interpose in behalf of such weak and sinful mortals as many of us are. He is as willing today as ever in the past to assist His servants, and that too, by what we call miraculous means should it be necessary."
